Hands of The Future

Upon returning to Glassport for a visit on May 20, 1974, I found the hands of my former classmates skilled in many fields.

As I stepped off the bus before the massive terminal, one of the many improvements I was to discover in my old hometown, I caught a glimpse of Rose Marie Bodus disappearing through the doors. I hurried after her and found her buying a ticket to New York from Rita Michalski, a clerk at the ticket booth. During the course of our conversation, she told me she was due to start rehearsals for a new musical written by the now famous musical team of Joseph Rusnak and Chuck Washowich.

I left Rose Marie with pleasant thoughts of her contribution to the entertainment field and started down the main street. An ultra-modern super market bearing the name ALPERN'S caught my eye. I immediately went inside and found my former classmate, John Montanti, managing this one of the many chain stores owned by Sylvan Alpern. They proudly ushered me through their market with all of its modern facilities and reported that business could not be better.

As I left the market, I decided to have lunch at the recently opened Isaly's store. To my surprise, the co-manager's were Martha Dworek and Richard Ferrone. I sat down at a table near the entrance, and my glance strayed to the buildings across the street. An attractive window above which hung this sign "ANTOINETTE'S DRESS SHOPPE" aroused my feminine curiosity. After I finished my lunch, I decided to visit the shop, discovering that it was operated by the skillful hands of the seamstress Antoinette DeCarlo. She informed me that another former classmate William Delmer owned the DELMER'S DANCE STUDIO next door.

Pausing in front of another large office building, I read on the directory: Edward Auslander—Architect; Davis & Davis—Marriage Counselors . . . Alwin Bill—Easy Loan Co. . . . Lanyi & Lucas—Engineers, and the offices of Sproull's Publishing Company, William Myers, local manager. From this I could see that these former classmates were successful in their chosen fields.

As I turned from the directory, I met Patricia Kashner and Louise Fato. Both girls were married now, and I found them willing to bring me up to date on the news of some of our other classmates. Leonard Mackowick, who as a student in high school spoke French fluently, just returned to France as the United States Ambassador in a private plane piloted by Thomas Pastor. On this flight, Carson Storer was the co-pilot, with Gary Miller navigator, and Patricia Cihota the hostess.

I was definitely surprised to learn that a great number of my classmates had chosen to make a career of the armed forces. Among these were Conrad Hart, Richard Hughes, Earl Myers, and Richard Gallaway. Lorraine Dworek and Margaret Jaskolski were model WAFS, and June May was serving as a nurse with the Army.

As conversation continued, I found that James Charney and William Ivan recently opened their new Oldsmobile garage and were doing a flourishing business. Donald Byers as their head mechanic had hired Thomas Churay, Carl Elko, Glenn Hall, and Paul LaFrankie to complete the garage's excellent staff. Directly opposite the garage, Ronald Meisl operated an elaborate barber shop, catering to many prominent people, among them Edward Fasiska, the famous auto designer.

I noticed as we approached the Ritz Theater that Lorraine Ginosky, an outstanding drama student in school, was appearing in her latest movie, A SCREAM IN THE NIGHT, written by Robert Crncic, directed by John McCracken, and produced by Bob Lokash, three former classmates.

In the field of music, I was happy to learn that Marvin Herren with his mellow trumpet and Raymond Fasiska an expert drummer, were now part of the nation's leading orchestra, under the direction of another classmate, the brilliant conductor, Paul Reeder.

Continuing down the street, we passed a large office building in which Bertie Brooks successfully conducts the "Our Miss Brooks School for Secretaries". Elizabeth Martina, Arlene Garland, Gloria Zoller, and Mary Ann Price compose the teaching staff.

While discussing the latest improvements in Glassport, the new hospital was proudly mentioned. Here I found many capable hands. Its staff, headed by the two brilliant brain surgeons, Guy Borelli and Jack Horox, included William Popovich, a well known throat specialist, and Joseph Sowa, X-Ray technician. Among the head nurses at the hospital were Sheila Hornfeck, Janet Stokes, Helen Weber, and Alice Jean Kopczynski. The hospital's modernly equipped ambulance was driven by Joseph Sikorski and Stanley Sopko.

The traffic officer at the town's busiest intersection was Raymond Hilko, who informed me that William Furst, Chief of Police, and Jerry Lees, who is also on the force do a splendid job of keeping order in the community where so many of our classmates are active.

Farther down the avenue I noticed a new bank, and was told that the president was Francis Przywarty and the vice-president was Richard Sherman. Also employed there are Beatrice Humenik, Mary Ann Adamcik, Barbara Maler, cashiers; Martha Jones, and Regina Cendroski, bookkeepers.

Passing another building in which William Shaw, the prominent physician, had his offices, they told me his secretary was Kay Duncan. In the same building Dolores Burkley works for Edward Borkowski, now a chiropractor. Daniel Squires, one of the state's leading lawyers, has his offices on the top floor and keeps his efficient secretary, Patricia Murphy, very busy.

It's a raid.

Rake up the mess.

Shine her up, girls.

Ship Ahoy!

They get paid for this?

Next we came to the local office of the Bell Telephone Company, efficiently managed by Walter Cooley, who employs as operators Elaine Hart, Arlene Rusnak, Thelma Wray, Mary Ann Kuzio, and Josephine Szewczyk. These girls, I recalled had been efficient business students in high school.

We had now reached Louise and Pat's destination, the "Mademoiselle Beauty Salon." The proprietors, Marianne Benner and Donna Thompson, employ Betty Sitko as their business manager and Esther Smith as receptionist. We met Gertrude Kill as she was leaving the shoppe with a new hair style. Gertrude, a leading efficiency expert, informed us that she had just finished renovating Morris Decolati's factory. Morris, along with Joseph Tomedolsky and Joseph DiGiorgio discovered a special cream guaranteed to put dimples in any cheek. She also told me that Joyce Miller is a buyer for a large department store in New York.

Stopping at Louis Borrelli's News Depot, I picked up a sports magazine edited by Anthony Frattaroli. From this I learned that Duane Backstrom manages the Pittsburgh Pirates, Ray Looney was recently appointed head football coach of Notre Dame, and Felix Zabroski is coach of the Los Angeles Rams. In this magazine, I also saw a picture of Shirley Taylor who coaches a girls professional basketball team of which Helen Dragos, Adella Jodie, Georgette Ladzun, Mary Ann Steffan, and Clara King are outstanding players.

Before I left Gertrude, she told me that Sandra Morgan, whose ambition was to teach, was with a mission school in Mexico. This reminded me to stop at Glassport's newly remodeled high school before leaving town. Here I found Anna Mae Conley and Mary Mollica teaching typing and shorthand respectively; Mary Lou Pearson in the social studies department, and Marlene Johnson teaching English. Patricia Kantorczyk was drilling French into her students, while Corrine Wentz and Karl Snyder were the physical education teachers of the school. While wondering through the first floor, I found James Yablonsky in the modern industrial arts shop and inquired about the coaches. I learned that Thomas Wezorek was the able football coach. Making one last stop, I visited William Kostyzak while he explained the different steps in solving an intricate geometry problem to his class.

Once again back at the bus terminal, I realized I'd forgotten to ask what Susette Grove was doing now. A picture of Pat Douglas on a magazine cover caught my attention. Upon looking through it, I found that Robert Finney and Ray Laine were commercial artists for the magazine, which was edited by Letti Dintino and featured SUSETTE ORIGINALS modeled by Dinnean Booth, Margaret Faychak, and Marcella Lowicki.

Satisfied that my class had done exceptionally well in their chosen fields, I boarded the bus which would take me back, with a full report, to Memoryville, U. S. A.

BOB LUCAS

Bobby has earned his first letter this year. He played his best game at home against Elizabeth when he scored 14 points. Bob played a good game on both boards where he fought for every rebound.

HARRY DAVIS

Guard

5' 11"

Harry earned his first letter this year. Due to a knee injury suffered in football, he couldn't put forth all he wished to. He played his best game at the Field House where he thrilled the fans with a group of three breath-taking set shots.

ANTHONY FRATTAROLI

His was undoubtedly the most thankless of all jobs. But "Fats" good naturedly managed all his responsibilities—keeping the uniforms in order, acting as official scorekeeper and being general handy man, were just a few. His letter this year will represent many hours of hard work.

Glassport 52

The Glads received their third set back in a row at the hands of the Baldwin Highlanders. Guy Borelli walked off with scoring honors, having a total of seventeen points on six field goals and five foul shots. Looney, Glassport's star forward, saw no action in the game due to an injury received in practice.

Glassport 50Bellmar 44

The Glads, clinching their seventh victory in a row, edged out the Bellmar Hurricanes in a thrilling game on the latter's floor. When the half time buzzer sounded, the Hurricanes led by six points, but, when the final whistle blew, the Glads landed on top by the score of 50-44. The Glassport Reserves had a fine record this year playing a total of twenty-one games and losing only two of them, Duquesne and Clairton. They also set a new record this year by whipping Dunbar at home 86-16.

After they had lost to Clairton they came back to cop eighteen consecutive victories. Mr. Gorun had the best defensive ball team of the past few years, proved by their keeping the opponents under 600 points all year.

At the end of four years of fine playing the Reserves have played a total of 99 games and captured a remarkable 89 victories.
